Narrative update:

As anticipated, it's been an intensely busy past month full of exciting training and events which allowed the TUSA Representatives and myself a better chance to meet and engage with new students and staff members on campus and online. The busiest and by far most interesting week has been orientation, where we had the opportunity to formally introduce ourselves to the student populace and inform them of the role that TUSA plays within the university, as well as the related advocacy networks we support. Some of the conversations with students were especially relevant, as I was able to get a sense of their initial perception of the university and their immediate experience of engaging with the courses so far, both online and in-person, whilst also gauging their thoughts on the broader academic landscape within UTAS. I hope that this communication continues and carries on in a more formalised capacity once the Vent Tents and Academic Roundtables are initiated by myself and other TUSA reps. Additionally, it has been a pleasure meeting with students, staff, and other actors whom are in the process of beginning their own projects and campaigns, I'm looking forward to continue supporting them in their endeavours and observing their work progress.

Carrying on from this, I aim to make it a priority to start the academic roundtables by the end of this month; I don't believe that the importance of directly keying in to the student population and directly embedding their needs and how they wish TUSA, and the university to run, can be understated.

There are several things to be done, I'm personally looking forward to beginning some of the key TUSA campaigns, particularly reforming the current SSAF (Student Services and Amenities Fees) model.

Apart from that, continuing to connect in with students over the coming Clubs & Societies Day in both Hobart and Launceston, will be both interesting and important!
