Narrative update:

Hi all,

I am glad to share with you what has been going on during the last month.

As Postgraduate Education President, I have followed further training from TUSA to effectively represent postgraduate students. This included a training on having difficult conversations with individuals, and within organisations. I now feel more confident in not avoiding conflicts, but to pick them up early and to act strategically for the benefit of all. Besides training, I attended the UTAS Academic Senate in which I became familiar with its culture, which was greatly structured and effective. I am looking forward to the next academic senate in which I want to raise concern over the cost of living crisis and how this is impacting postgraduate education.

I organised and hosted two 'Shut Up & Write! Sessions' for postgraduate students which were marginally attended. My aim is to share the upcoming sessions via socials and posters to increase student attendance.

I furthermore have met with the Undergraduate Education President, Solomon, to organise academic roundtables. I am thrilled to announce that we are planning to hold the first roundtable next month!

I am looking forward to continuing represent postgraduate students at UTAS.

You can send me an email via: Postgrad.President@TUSA.utas.edu.au

I am here to listen, to advocate for you as a postgraduate student, and ensure that this is acted upon in universities policy.

Your postgraduate experience counts, you can count on me to advocate for you.
